

Jan van Eden

Jan van Eden es un observador de cuánto ocurre, un reportero de la realidad, un cronista apacible y a la vez punzante que invita a pensar, a disfrutar, que ralentiza en sus trazos mujeres que pasan, mujeres que sueñan, mujeres que irrumpen como una aparición, mujeres que van hacia ninguna parte, hombres y mujeres que van y vienen como la espuma del tiempo. Al artista nada le es indiferente: le interesan las calles y las avenidas que a menudo adquieren el extrañamiento de una pesadilla, los aeropuertos y las estaciones de trenes, donde transita la espera y la esperanza; le interesan las estancias interiores, los silencios, las soledades, la anchurosa melancolía que sepega a la muchedumbre. Le interesa sobre todo la gente: Jan van Eden es un pintor de rostros y cuerpos, más o menos expresionistas. En su obra siempre conviven casi por igual la denuncia (o la llamada de atención, la advertencia, el grito mitigado) con la sensualidad y el arrebató metafísico. En ese sentido, también cabe decir que es un pintor de instantes: mira, ve y fija sobre el lienzo o en la fotografía una percepción, un sentimiento, una secuencia indeleble. El deslumbramiento de una emoción tan poderosa como un plenilunio.
